My passion

It is hard to put a name to what I do, studying how different elements affect our lives. Since I create horoscopes for houses, astro-architect comes close to defining it.

The path to my passion

I always had an interest in astrology and zodiac-signs. But, one day, a man made three predictions about my life. I never believed him till all three came true by the end of the week. The man was Dr L N Kusuma, a homoeopath and a cosmic research scientist. Together, we conducted research in Vaastu Shastra in over 30,000 homes, offices and other premises in Andhra Pradesh. We wanted to know why people born with good planetary positions didn't always do well in life. We found it is not just people. Every home has a horoscope, too.

Making my passion a profession

After seven years in the research of astrology, I got hooked. Every day, I discovered, and still do, the different ways little changes in our surroundings make a big difference in our lives. Like placing a plant in a particular area can improve one's health. I avoid making major structural changes in someone's home or work place. My tools are colours, mirrors, plants, etc.

Years of study and practice have made me so intuitive that I don't have to visit someone in person to help them. But when I do meet people, they open their lives to me. You could say my work involves some sort of counselling. After over 20 years, I still have an insatiable thirst for more knowledge on how the universe and our lives are interconnected.
